

Construction

Leech Tishman's Construction Practice Group offers our clients a unique perspective and an inside edge on construction-related legal matters: a team of lawyers with a solid background in all aspects and disciplines within the construction industry.

In Brief

Our legal team includes lawyers who have been employed in the construction industry as well as in law firms; in addition, they have spoken and written comprehensive material on construction-related issues. They combine this experience with legal knowledge and many years of involvement with public and private sector project development, project design, project delivery, and dispute resolution. This comprehensive background allows our team to approach complex construction matters with the technical insight, common sense, and the seasoned experience necessary to anticipate, identify and resolve legal issues, manage risk, and provide guidance to our clients at any stage in their design, financing, construction and operating facility activities.
