Alan S. Fellheimer focuses his practice on commercial litigation and the transactional matters that arise from it, including corporate workouts and debt restructuring.

Alan handles a range of matters involving regulatory compliance for banks and other financial institutions, defends clients facing white-collar criminal charges, and applies his negotiation and litigation skills to complicated family law issues.

Whether the challenge is a thorny bank-borrower dispute, an urgent trade secret theft matter, or a complex fraud case, Alan brings his exceptional problem-solving techniques to the representation of every client.

Despite being a fearless presence in the courtroom, Alan excels at crafting unique, creative solutions to resolve disputes and enable his clients to focus their full attention on moving forward with their businesses and their lives.

Beyond his day-to-day practice, Alan has lectured for the Pennsylvania Bar Association, the Pennsylvania Bar Institute, and at Temple University's Beasley School of Law in the areas of debtors' rights and creditors' remedies, bankruptcy and its alternatives, corporate reorganization, the Uniform Commercial Code, and representation of small and medium-sized businesses.

Alan currently serves as a member of Temple University President's Advisory Board, a trustee of the Temple University Law Foundation, and as a member of the Gratz College Board of Directors and Governor's Executive Committee. Alan is also a director of Hill International, an NYSE-listed infrastructure project management company.

Alan's background includes serving as Owner, Chairman and CEO of the Pennsylvania Business Bank, a Pennsylvania-chartered bank (1998-2008). He was also CEO and Chairman of Equimark Corp., a New York Stock Exchange-listed federally chartered bank holding company (1985-1991).
