Matthew Cono Capozzoli focuses his practice on complex and commercial litigation matters, representing individuals and businesses in Federal and State courts in New York and New Jersey.

Matt specializes in ultracomplex and unusual cases where success requires more than the one-size-fits-all approach used by many general litigators. Known for his creativity and problem solving, Matt has prosecuted and defended multiple high-profile financial fraud cases, including disputes related to the collapse of Bernard L. Madoff Investment Securities and Southport Lane Management. Matt also devotes a significant portion of his practice to defending victims' rights and has litigated significant wrongful death and civil-rights-related cases.

Matt formerly served as a graduate fellow with the Eagleton Institute of Politics and studied New Jersey legislative policy at the State House.
