Healthcare Labor & Employment

Our attorneys handle complex labor and employment issues that impact the healthcare industry, including peer review proceedings, employment contracts, licensing, and regulatory compliance.

Accelerated healthcare reform has transformed the landscape of practice for all healthcare providers and professionals. Leech Tishman has first-hand experience in handling labor and employment disputes that arise in this challenging new environment.

Our litigators defend against claims from all phases of the employment cycle, including peer review, wrongful termination, administrative proceedings, agency investigations and enforcement, licensing, and other areas of regulation. From physician contract disputes to professional claims and medical staff issues, we combine business acumen with strategic litigation to provide our healthcare and life sciences clients with robust labor and employment representation.

Physicians and other healthcare providers are plagued with unique regulatory burdens that impact their employment and licensing. Our attorneys have a depth of experience protecting individuals and businesses in employment-related legal matters that threaten their ability to continue providing quality care to their patients.
